KUMON KIDS BLOOM IN APRIL!

No fooling...the scent of spring is in the air. The change of season brings warmer days. This is an excellent time of year to make a fresh start with Kumon! As the school year is winding down, now is the time to think ahead to the summer and the next school year. Now is a time when your child's abilities can blossom through Kumon study. Spring can be a time of new growth for your child's academic development in Kumon. The efforts made now to remain committed to Kumon will bear fruit later in the year. Results can be seen even sooner if consistency in completion of homework assignments can be maintained. In Kumon, April showers really can bring May flowers!

This time of year can also be a challenge to keep students motivated. Spring fever can contribute to some students losing interest. It is up to parents to provide the guidance and direction children need to endure the storms of frustration some students may encounter. Your child may require your close supervision at home to make sure all assignments are completed. Parents should look at each day's assigned worksheets to check that the name, date and completion times are correctly recorded and that all of the work is completed. Regular class attendance is also very important for keeping the student up with the moderate study pace individually designed by the Instructor.

During the month of April, some parents might want to arrange a conference with the Kumon Instructor. This will enable parents to become better informed about their child's progress. It will also help in setting future goals for the child in the program. Patience, perseverance and determination are all very important for success in Kumon. The true benefits of the Kumon Method are realized only through a long-term commitment. Active parental involvement and enthusiasm are critical to keeping students motivated.
